Division of Anthropology California State University, Fullerton

Master of Arts in Anthropology

The graduate program in anthropology offers advanced study in four-field scientific anthropology with a specialization in Anthropological Archaeology, Cultural Anthropology, or Evolutionary Anthropology. For information on faculty interests in these areas please visit our Division website at <http://anthro.fullerton.edu>. We admit new students only in Fall.

Our graduate students have successfully completed MA theses and projects incorporating field, library, and lab-based research. For example, students have conducted field research in Asia, Africa, Latin America, and here in California; analyzed archaeological collections; worked in zoos and museums; and integrated anthropology into curricula at the K-12 and community college levels.

As a graduate student you will work closely with your individual MA advisor and their MA committee in developing an exam, thesis or project that meets your educational needs and expectations. For that reason, it is important that before applying to the program you familiarize yourself with our faculty and their research expertise and interests. The Graduate Program Advisor (subfield Coordinator) and your individual MA advisor will help you to understand, navigate, and fulfill division and university requirements and regulations.

III. STUDY PLAN FOR THE MA IN ANTHROPOLOGY

Graduate students are expected to complete 24 units of coursework plus 6 units of exam, thesis or project (in addition to any course deficiencies). The 30 units are as follows:

9 units: ANTH 511, 512, and 513

Three core seminars, ANTH 511 (Theory and Method in Biological Anthropology), ANTH 512 (Theory and Method in Archaeology), and ANTH 513 (Theory and Method in Cultural & Linguistic Anthropology) are required. 511 and 512 offered only in fall; 513 only in spring.

3 units: ANTH 510 Research Design (required). Offered in spring only.

6 units: Two ANTH 504T (Graduate Seminar, selected topics)

All graduate students must take at least two ANTH 504T graduate seminars in their sub-field. ANTH 504T courses are variable-topics graduate seminars, through which students have the opportunity to explore topics in more depth. The 504 classes are rotated among the faculty of each subfield to expose students to different research issues in anthropology.

6 units: Two 400- or 500-level elective courses in anthropology or a related field

Graduate students take two elective courses, which may be an additional ANTH 504T class, a 400-level class in anthropology, ANTH 599 (Independent Study) with your project/thesis advisor, or a 400- or 500-level class in a related field, with the approval of your thesis advisor. ANTH 599 may be taken only once. Students taking a 400-level course for graduate credit will be expected (as specified in the course syllabus by University policy) to do additional work beyond that of an undergraduate.

6 units: ANTH 598 (Thesis) or ANTH 597 (Project) or Exam (3 units + one additional class)

To earn the M.A., students are required to register for either 6 units of ANTH 598 (Thesis) or 6 units of ANTH 597 (Project), or 3 units of Exam plus one additional elective. Students may register for all 6 units in the same semester or for 3 units in two semesters. Per University regulations, you are not permitted to enroll in more than 6 TOTAL units of your choice of thesis (598), or project (597).

- All students enter the program on the Comprehensive Exam Track as a default
 - Students wishing to complete a thesis or project instead of the comprehensive exam must submit a proposal to their advisor and committee for approval.
 - Permission to write a thesis or to complete a project is contingent upon (1) maintaining a 3.25 grade point average after 15 units of upper-division and graduate coursework, and (2) demonstrating proficiency in research and writing skills.
- Thesis Option (6 units of ANTH 598): A thesis is defined as the written product of a systematic study of a significant problem. It consists of extended discussion, with a central argument, based on complex analysis of your original research and includes a review of the literature on the topic as well as a historical framework. The finished product demonstrates originality, sets forth the sources for and method of gathering information, analyzes the data, and offers a conclusion. The thesis has a required format, and must be submitted to the Graduate Studies Office as well as to the Division. The approved thesis will be bound at the Bookstore according to certain specifications, microfilmed, copyrighted, and listed in the University Library's computer database. Students registered for ANTH 598 (thesis) are eligible to apply for the University's Giles Brown Thesis Award.

- Project Option (6 units of ANTH 597): A project is a significant undertaking appropriate to an applied aspect of the field (e.g. curation of a museum exhibition, an ethnographic film, a curriculum proposal, and so forth). Like a thesis, the project also requires a written component, in which the work is described and summarized, including the project's significance, objectives, methodology, and a conclusion or recommendation. The project is submitted only to the Division, and is housed in the Division Library (bound in a variety of formats as approved by your advisor).
- Exam Option (3 units): At least one semester before taking their exam, students on the Comprehensive Exam Track will select three areas of concentration in consultation with their MA advisors and committee members. The committee will assist the student in preparing for the exam by (e.g.) assigning a reading list, and will meet with the student for discussion and guidance. Students will have a total of nine hours to answer questions from each of the three areas. The questions are designed to test the depth and breadth of the student's overall general knowledge of anthropology, as well as sub-field specific knowledge pertaining to the student's own research area. One additional elective required.

Methods Requirement—OR—Second Language Requirement [students select ONE of the options]. Students should work closely with their MA advisors to determine whether the Methods Course Option or the Second Language Proficiency Option is best for their program of study.

Option 1: Methods Course

In consultation with their faculty advisors, students will select and take one of the following methods courses as appropriate for their chosen subfield and research agenda. Methods courses may be taken as electives on the Study Plan; alternatively, this requirement may be considered fulfilled if a student has taken an approved methods course as an undergraduate.

- ANTH 400 Qualitative Methods in Anthropology
- ANTH 401 Ethnographic Field Methods
- ANTH 403 Archaeological Field Methods
- ANTH 404 Analytical Methods in Archaeology
- ANTH 406 Descriptive Linguistics
- ANTH 418 GIS in Archaeology
- ANTH 425 Lithic Analysis
- ANTH 445 Quantitative Methods in Anthropology
- ANTH 455 Behavioral Observation
- ANTH 463 Archaeofaunal Analysis
- ANTH 476 Archaeological Investigations [field class]
- ANTH 497 Cultural Investigations [field class]

Note: Alternative methods courses may be approved for this requirement; talk with your thesis advisor.

Option 2: Second Language Proficiency

If proficiency in a second language is appropriate for a student's research agenda, a student may show proficiency in several alternative ways. These include, for example, having earned a degree in a language other than English, passing an intermediate-level proficiency exam, completing the equivalent of three years of high school study in another language, completing a Study Abroad program in which the language of instruction was not English. There are several additional options, the details of which should be discussed with your MA advisor.

Additional courses beyond the 30 units (up to the limit established by the University). Courses not on the Study Plan do not count toward the MA degree, but are still used in calculating your overall grade point average while in the MA program.

IV. STEPS TOWARD the COMPLETION of the MA in ANTHROPOLOGY

[After admission to the program]

1. Attend the Mandatory Pre-Fall Semester Orientation Meeting.
2. Develop the Study Plan in consultation with your MA advisor.
3. If you plan to use postgraduate units toward your MA, you must petition the Records Office for approval as soon as possible (see “Postgraduate Credit” in the University Catalog).
 - For CSUF students with a BA coming in to the MA program: A maximum of nine units of 400 and 500-level classes taken at CSUF may be applied towards the MA Study Plan, if they meet the following criteria:
 - The grade earned was a B or better
 - The units in questions were taken in the senior year
 - The units were not used toward either the 120 units needed for the BA or toward the 45 units needed for the BA major in Anthropology
 - University policy allows graduate students coming from another university to petition for permission to apply up to nine units of graduate work, in which they earned a B or better, towards the CSUF Study Plan. However, the Division will determine equivalency, if any, of such coursework. Under most circumstances, the Division of Anthropology prefers that students take the core MA coursework at CSUF; typically only an elective course may be substituted.
4. Become Classified: Graduate students who have completed 9 units of graduate coursework must file an official MA Study Plan to be classified as a graduate student in anthropology.
5. Work with your MA Advisor closely in planning your Comprehensive Exam - OR- designing your Thesis or Project research in taking courses that will help you achieve your research goals. Discuss with your advisor the composition of your thesis committee, which will be composed of the advisor and two other full time faculty members in the Division of Anthropology.
6. Advance to Candidacy: Students will be advanced to candidacy when they have formed a committee and either created an approved plan for the Comprehensive Exam, or filed an approved Prospectus for the Thesis or Project.
7. Register for EITHER 6 units of Thesis, Project, or Exam [Exam is 3 units + one additional elective]. (See discussion and description of these options in Section III.) A MAXIMUM of 6 total units of Thesis or Project is allowed.
8. File for Graduation: Students must file for graduation check six months before graduation.
9. Exceeding the Target Graduation Date: Students must stay continuously enrolled while in the MA program. If all coursework is completed, students may be approved to enroll in GS700 through Extended Education.
10. Time to Degree: The Division of Anthropology is committed to ensuring that graduate students complete the MA degree as quickly as possible. By taking courses full-time or part-time, students can complete the degree using a two-year or three-year plan. Limited extensions may be granted in certain circumstances, but not beyond five years [the university time limit].
